Weekend Kennisis Lake art tour doubles as fundraiser

DARREN LUM
County Life Staff

Art on the Dock, hosted by the Kennisis Lake Cottage Owners Association, has three primary objectives: to give local artists an opportunity to sell their work; to ensure a friendly event for residents and visitors of the lake; and to raise funds for the Artist in the School and Community Program.

Event co-ordinator Janis Parker says the event has been achieving its goals since it started five years ago.

"It really was community building. The fact that it's turned into a strong community-building event and does some fundraising for the Artists in the School Program. It's just a win-win. It's a really good event and last year we were able to donate over $5,000," she said.

Close to $10,000 has been raised for the Artist in the School and Community Program since the art tour began.

Each artist either pays a $50 fee or donates an item. The items are used for an auction at the Ladies of the Lake Luncheon, held on the Canada Day weekend. Those funds, along with contributions from the public, are then donated.

Parker Pad and Printing and Viper Marketing have been the sponsors since the beginning, helping to cover the event's expenses.

This year's event includes a few new artists, who stepped in for others that did not participate this year and a limit to the locations. Having more than one artist at a location allows event-goers to see more.

The two-day studio tour is on Saturday, July 13 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and on Sunday, July 14 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and includes 20 locations and close to 40 artists.

Plan your route by using the map, or refer to the 32-page program, available online at www.klcoa.org/2019-art-on-the-dock-program-now-published/ and in printed copies at Kennisis Marina, Haliburton Forest Cookhouse and Abbey Gardens.

When compared to other studio tours, Parker said the main difference is the option to cruise the lake, see her neighbours, visit with artists and see great art.

"That's the biggest difference and it's in the summer ... I think it's totally different because you can go from dock to dock," she said. The tour can also be completed by vehicle.

The seed for the event was planted during a conversation between Parker and artist Shelley Beach, who died from cancer just before last year's event. Parker remembers how she and Beach, who were both on the arts council at the time, were interested in raising money for the Artist in the School and Community Program.

"This really became her idea. Tayce Wakefield took it and ran with it, but I kind of love doing it just because it was Shelley's idea," she said. "For me and some of the people involved right from the beginning it's kind of just ... it was a really a great idea and got people to contribute and donate."

Cast your vote for theatre with rural rogues

KATE BUTLER
Special to County Life

Actors Amy Brohm, Rita Jackson and Victoria Bingham were rehearsing Sue Vorvis's play on the evening of July 4. /Submitted by Kate Butler

This summer, Rural Rogues Productions would like to invite you to be part of a theatre democracy! Since 2016, the Rural Rogues team has been committed to presenting theatre inspired by the local history, culture and landscape of Haliburton County. This past winter, we brought together a group of "graduates" from our beginners' playwriting course to continue to hone their skills and we're delighted to share the results of their endeavours with you later this month.

For the last several weeks, a group of theatre enthusiasts have been working together to bring four very different short plays to life. Fay Martin's piece, Three Sisters' Garden, delves into the history of Stanhope Township and explores the challenges faced by settler women in the community. The piece I've written, A Woman Has to Look after Herself also looks back into our community's history, but only as far as the 1930s. It tackles the tale of one of our county's most scandalous residents, Eva Coo. Coo's story is now known all over New York State, but in her hometown of Haliburton, she's somewhat rather less recalled. Oliver Zielke's short play, The Pearly Gates, tackles the issue of sibling relationships and their long lasting influence (for better or worse), while Sue Vorvis has taken an entertaining and hilarious look at planning and living the cottage dream in This Is Our Home.

Having been part of the playwriting process this winter, I was curious to hear what had brought the other playwrights back for the intermediate level course. Fay Martin told me that she found it "helpful to have other people read and respond to [her] work," particularly people who "are engaged in a similar struggle with their topic of choice." In taking writing for the stage to the next level, all of the playwrights noted a change in their experience. Martin noted that all of the playwrights were becoming more comfortable with "making the medium work for [them]," while Oliver Zielke told me that, for him, writing was now becoming "an exercise in reduction, focus [and] trimming excess." Rural Rogues places a great emphasis on capacity building in local theatre, so it's been exciting to see how our community of emerging playwrights has continued to grow and develop.

Rural Rogues is also a company rooted in our landscape. We perform outdoors (whenever the weather cooperates) and this summer's show will be held on the grounds of the Haliburton Highlands Museum. For actors and crew used to a traditional theatre, this can be a groundbreaking and liberating experience. As director Michael Clipperton explains it, it allows "freedom of movement and placement of audience, no lighting requirements, [and] minimal sets." That said it can also present challenges in the form of "the weather and the weather and the weather..." Not to worry though; in the case of inclement weather, we simply move our performances indoors. We do, however, ask our audience members to bring their own seats for our outdoor shows.

One of the other features that distinguishes Rural Rogues is the group's commitment to presenting new work. This is extremely exciting for the entire team, because the play comes with, as Clipperton puts it, "no road map." In speaking with the cast, they have been keen to highlight the "collaborative" feeling of putting a brand-new show together, as well as a keen sense of responsibility to the work. As actress Rita Jackson told me, "I realize that the playwright has offered me their 'baby,' and I want to love and care for it as much as they do." She mentioned that she has come to particularly identify with her role as Laura in This Is Our Home who she says is "playful, focused, determined, thorough, and sometimes confused to the point of "distraction," as she plans her dream home. There can be no doubt that new theatre, though it comes with great responsibility, also comes with a great sense of adventure! Imagine being the very first person to play a certain role – not having to think about who played the part on Broadway, or in the Netflix production…or won the Oscar for it!

Interestingly, casting votes with regard to theatrical works is a custom which goes all the way back to ancient Greece, but this year, we'd like our audience to be part of planning Rural Rogues' future! In November, Rural Rogues plans to send one of this summer's plays to compete in the 2019 Eastern Ontario Drama League's One Act Play Festival in Perth, but we just can't decide which one! At both the July 20 (7 p.m.) or 21 (2 p.m.) shows, we'll be asking you to help us choose. The festival in Perth will be a great opportunity to put Haliburton County on the regional map in a whole new way, so we encourage you to have your voice heard and come on out and support local talent! Wondering how to decide where to cast your vote? Our director suggests that you consider "which of the productions resonates with [you] most. Does it make [you] laugh, cry [or] think? Does it leave [you] wanting to know more?" And as one of my fellow playwrights said to me, "it isn't really a play unless it has an audience" which is why Rural Rogues is so excited to hear your input! Tickets are just $20 and can be reserved by contacting us at info@haliburtonhighlandsmuseum.com or 705-457-2760 or purchased at the gate. Don't miss out on the chance to be part of theatre history!

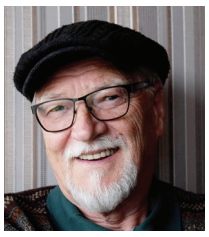
The return of Virtual Reali-Kitty

IN THIS SPACE last week, among other ramblings, I wrote about the fact that one sculpture seemed to be missing from the second annual Haliburton Outdoor Sculpture Exhibition, currently on display in the downtown area of Haliburton.

There were supposed to be six sculptures, but after two trips around the village I only found five. After publication of last week's story, where I wrote about the mystery, I eventually succeeded in getting in touch with Jim Blake, curator of the Haliburton Sculpture Forest, and a prime mover of the Haliburton Outdoor Sculpture Exhibition. He informed me that the "missing" sculpture had been temporarily removed while construction was going on downtown. It was a somewhat deflating end to the "mystery," I must say.



GEORGE FARRELL
On Arts/Culture

But in order not to appear totally uninformed regarding the local arts scene, I will offer the explanation that I do not usually attend art openings, but report on the art after the fact. That's a story for another day, but on this occasion, had I gone to the opening, the "missing" sculpture would have been a non-issue, because at the opening the piece was in its rightful place. So, to compensate for writing about a non-issue, I decided this week, to write about the sculpture, which is called Virtual Reali-Kitty. It's located in front of the Bank of Montreal and it was created by Thoreau Bakker, a Toronto-based contemporary artist. Bakker's current focus is on three dimensional (3D) media, of which Virtual Reali-Kitty is an example.

For those who may not be up to date on technology, virtual reality is a way of creating a computer-generated environment that immerses the user into a virtual world by wearing and activating, a virtual reality visor. This takes the user to a simulated world that makes it an experience completely detached from his or her actual surroundings.

So what Virtual Reali-Kitty conveys is a depiction of the virtual reality experience. It's a whimsical flat-black piece, which shows a cartoonish kitten wearing a virtual reality visor. Bakker explains that the piece was sculpted in virtual reality. He was able to "save the image in virtual reality, download it to his computer, and then print it (in sections, with a 3-D printer), put those sections together to create the image, create a mould of this, and cast it in Polyurethane." In his online information on the piece Bakker explains that "This whimsical sculpture cartoon kitty…. was actually created in virtual reality and then transformed into its current corporeal form to grace the main street of Haliburton."

So now we know the thinking behind Virtual Reali-Kitty and how it was made. It's a fun piece, on display until Oct. 31.

Top 10 things to say when you lose a good fish

IF YOU ARE an angler, there will be times this summer when you will lose a good-sized fish in front of credible witnesses. While throwing your rod into the lake, stomping your feet on the floor of the boat, or showing off your extensive knowledge of off-coloured phrases are all acceptable responses, I believe a simple phrase said coolly works even better, especially if your polarized fishing glasses are hiding the tears welling up in your eyes.

Here are the top 10 phrases I use after losing a big fish.

STEVE GALEA
Humour Columnist

1. I have always believed that long distance releases are better for them.
2. I hate showing off.
3. It's better this way. If I had landed that fish, it would have changed our whole relationship.
4. I always let the little ones go.
5. Wrong species.
6. Well, my new release technique works perfectly.
7. For me, it's all about hooking them.
8. If I had landed it, you would have wanted to take photos – and my hair is a mess.
9. I wasn't sure the boat could handle the added weight.
10. It's good for the fish's self esteem.

Highlands Cinemas celebrates 40th anniversary

Build it and they will come. He built it, and 40 years later they are still coming

The marquee of the landmark Highlands Cinemas in Kinmount stands tall and proud on a hillside leading up to the unique, some say "magical," five-screen cineplex and museum in the woods, built by local visionary Keith Stata.

"I was born loving film," Stata said. He was six when he got his start as a theatre operator in the family woodshed. "The show ended when a skunk came in."

Celebrating the cinema's 40th anniversary on June 29, filmgoers enjoyed cake and the $8.50 combo (popcorn, drink, and a chocolate bar) for just $3. The extraordinary 4,000 square foot museum which is always part of the ticket price – a maze of movie memorabilia, the largest vintage movie projector collection in Canada dating back more than a century, original movie posters, more than 100 mannequins dressed in period clothing, Horror Hall with life-size monsters from every major horror film, Memory Lane displaying 10 decades of photos, headlines, clothing, and toys covering the past 100 years – continued to enliven the memories of older moviegoers and inspire the imaginations of the theatre's

Theatre started with 58 seats

younger fans.

But, it wasn't always like this.

Back in 1979, thirty-two year old Stata, with years in the construction business, embraced his love of cinema and designed and built his Kinmount home which included a 58 seat theatre where the rec room would have been.

"When we first opened, nobody came," he said. "People thought there was just a TV in the basement because it was in a house."

Gradually, word got out and, by the mid-1980s, Stata's little theatre had outgrown its demand with people lining up along the highway. That's when he decided to expand and add a second screen, then a third, fourth and, by 1996, a fifth screen, resulting in a total of 550 seats in theatres comparable in size to those found in multiplex cinemas, in an 18,500-square foot building.

"If you're going to put in a theatre," Stata said, "never mind five theatres in a town of 300 people, then you're going to have to make it something so special that people will talk about it." He did that, too.

As 450 small movie theatres across North America were closing their doors, Stata purchased a huge amount of equipment, projectors, and vintage décor – sold what he didn't need, and with the rest turned Highlands Cinemas into an unforgettable destination experience.

Filled with art deco wall and ceiling pieces and large reupholstered seats, each of the five theatres transcends time for older audiences and instills a sense of wonder in younger ones.

"When cinemas were first designed," Stata said, "theatres were really the cathedrals of the motion picture, decorated with gold, marble, velvet. The guy who didn't have very much could go to this cathedral, this grandeur and watch this flicker on the screen, and hopefully identify with something he saw, and leave with a good memory."

Stata's visionary "world of cinema" made a great impression on Toronto filmmaker, Matt Finlin, director/partner at Door Knocker Media. "Keith is part of the reason I wanted to make movies," Finlin said. "I first went to his cinema in 1991 as a boy and was taken by the building and the movie going experience he had created. Going to the movies is something that is fading in a world of Netflix and Amazon. Gathering in a space with people for a few hours to experience something as a collective is going away." Finlin is working on a documentary on Highlands Cinemas and aims to share its story with movie audiences worldwide.

> I was born loving film.
> — KEITH STATA

Without hesitation, Stata, a lover of fantasy said: "My favourite film, The Time Machine." The most popular film shown over 40 years at Highlands Cinemas: Pirates of the Caribbean. "We lucked out and got a print, and took in $65,000 in tickets over a 10 to 12 week run."

But, in 2012, a major challenge confronted Stata and his business partner, Roland Hamilton, when movie projectors went digital. "Either we had to borrow $300,000 to put digital projectors in each of our five theatres or close," Stata said. "Between a small grant from the government and money we were able to put together, we kept the cinema alive."

"A lot of people have been coming up to me and saying, 'we want to thank you for keeping this place open.' It's kind of gratifying to think that you've provided something that they've found interesting."

What is also gratifying to Stata is taking care of his 41 rescue cats. "The humane society wouldn't take them and neither would any other places." he said. "Since they wound up here and would have died, they have been given a second chance and a new permanent home. And given the cost of food, housing, vet care, and considering my age, it is impossible for me to add any more." The cats go through 5,000 cans of food a year. Feeding them and cleaning their litter takes Stata 42 hours a week.

And, their caregiver does more than that. Walking around the cinema grounds one can see the extensive system of enclosed cat bridges and play areas, as well as numerous houses that Stata has built for their comfort and enjoyment.

"The cats are more important than the theatre," he said. "We're only travelers. We're only here for a short period of time. And movie projectors are more than just a hunk of metal. Projectors to me reflect the memories of millions and millions of people who sat in the dark and experienced that special moment, whether it was shedding a tear when Bambi's mother was dying or Lana Turner in Imitation of Life.

Highlands Cinemas shows first-run movies in a world of nostalgia. Unique. Magical. It's a place that takes you back in time and back again. No wonder Keith Stata's favourite film is The Time Machine.

Students celebrate and learn about Indigenous culture

SUE TIFFIN
County Life Staff

For the fifth year, Wilberforce elementary school students, their families, and school staff joined with members of the local Metis and Algonquin communities to celebrate Indigenous culture.

At an event held June 14 at the Lloyd Watson Centre, WES principal Elaine Fournier said students had the opportunity to learn about traditional cooking, drumming and art from members of the local Metis and Algonquin communities.

"Celebrating our local Indigenous culture in meaningful and authentic ways is very important to us at WES," said Fournier. "Even in a small school, we don't always know our students' heritage as well as we think we do, and providing opportunities for the children to participate in meaningful learning opportunities that may be a part of their culture has a deep and lasting impact for our students. This type of celebration also provides an opportunity to engage our families in culturally relevant ways and for the entire community to learn more about Indigenous culture from our community partners."

The event held this year was supported by special funding from the Trillium Lakelands District School Board which is geared toward promoting Indigenous culture within area schools.

"TLDSB is committed to building meaningful relationships with elders, knowledge keepers, senators, community stakeholders and Indigenous families," reads the TLDSB web site. "We are committed to further support our students and staff as they learn the rich and vibrant cultural traditions, histories, and contributions of Indigenous Peoples of Turtle Island ... Schools are supported in their efforts to incorporate Indigenous learning into classroom curriculum content and activities. Funding is provided annually to all schools to bring Indigenous elders, knowledge keepers, Metis senators and community partners into schools to share cultural teachings."

For more information about Indigenous education in TLDSB, visit tldsb.ca/programs/indigenous-education/.

Happy birthday, Canada!
Best friends Victoria King, 11, and Jackie Ranson, 11, wear their pride on their cheeks as they hold a homemade Canada flag at West Guilford's annual celebration on July 1. College turns sod for new campus

Creative by Nature campaign has already raised three-quarters of $2.5 million goal

MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Barb Bolin must be a creative fundraiser by nature.

After all, on Friday afternoon when she officially announced that the public commitment to the new Sir Sandford Fleming College campus in Glebe Park is $2.5-million, she was also able to reveal that she and her committee have already raised 75% of that amount.

Bolin's been busily working behind the scenes to raise the money since March of 2001, when MPP Chris Hodgson announced that SSFC had been successful in applying for $5 million in SuperBuild funding for a new campus. She took a leave of absence from her duties as campus principal to lead the fundraising effort.

Joined by a committee headed by Dysart et al reeve Murray Fearrey, she quietly went to work on the Creative By Nature campaign. Approaching people associated with the Highlands and especially the college's Haliburton School of the Arts, she was able to raise donations and commitments totally $1.9 million by Friday afternoon's sod-turning ceremony.

Crocodile becomes an instant celebrity. But where is it?

MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

If the crocodile which is supposedly lurking in the shallow waters of Lake Kashagawigamog is ever found, the first thing it should do is hire a Hollywood agent.

The Kash croc is famous. Even though only four, maybe five, people have actually seen it, it became a media darling after news of its sighting was picked up by the likes of CBC Radio and the Toronto Sun. A "crocodile hunter" from Ottawa spent two days trying to find it, television crews interviewed boaters and swimmers, the Ministry of Natural Resources was inundated with calls, and rumours spread faster than gossip at the Kozy Korner's breakfast club.

"Have you seen the croc?" became the most frequently asked question in the Highlands, right after "Have they caught it yet?"

In a matter of days, the Kash croc was a star.

Not everyone applauded its arrival on our fair shores, however. Some of the people who called the MNR were fearful of their children's safety and at least one resort on the lake did a sweep of its beach before declaring an all-clear for swimmers.

The theory is that someone bought the crocodile, most likely a swamp- and river-dwelling caiman, and when it grew too big to handle, dumped it in the lake.

The first person to see it was Laurie McFarland. Last Sunday, June 23, she and her six-year-old son Sean were out in their paddleboat on Lake Kashagawigamog, just past their cottage at Clees
